

TREE WHISPERERS OF EDEN

Tree Whisperers is an educational project based in Eden. It was developed, as part of the Sustain Eden programme, to create opportunities and resources to help increase children's understanding of climate change. Trees provide the general theme for the project offering a focus through which children can explore and learn about causes, effects and responses to climate change.

Our aim is to provide children with enriching learning opportunities. Through working with experienced practitioners, who are passionate and knowledgeable about woodland and the environment, children will be able to explore, discover and learn about trees and climate change.

By exploring climate change issues, whilst strengthening their relationship with their local natural environments, we hope that children will become empowered with information which they can share and use in practical ways now and in the future.

On offer September 2014 – July 2015

- Funded school sessions, woodland and creative sessions and tree planting to support your own school projects and topics.
- An Eden wide project supporting pupils to creatively record their local trees for an exhibition and tree archive.
- On line resources and short films about climate change and Cumbrian trees.
- A month long school and community celebration in Penrith, June 2015.
